

Adam Hart first lived in Hackney from 1969 -1972 and has been a resident parent there since 1982. He has a background of training in psychology, philosophy, filmmaking, bricklaying and social anthropology.

In the 1960's he worked in a number of groundbreaking enterprises in the arts around London and as a research assistant for Medical Research Council, In the 1970's he worked in the construction industry as tradesman and contractor and as a community service organiser for the Northants Probation Department and Coventry Community Industry. In the 1980's he worked as a social researcher at the Tavistock Institute of Human Relations and as a building contractor in London. He joined HCD in 1992 as property development worker and became its Executive Director in 1996.

He has practical experience of living in a housing co-operative and of worker co-operative groups. He is a non-professional musician and sailor.